Two notices that subscriptions to the bonus fund for the electrification of the Glendale-Montrose line on Glendale avenue have been sent out by Herman Nelson, manager of the Glendale avenue branch of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings bank, but still a large number of the subscriptions remain unpaid, it was reported today.

A committee consisting of C. S. Stuart, Mrs. W. E. Mercer and Charles E. Stanley was appointed at the last meeting of the Glendale Advancement association to take care of the collection of the subscriptions that were not paid at the bank. A number of workers have been secured and to each of these a list of names is given.

The committee is sending out another appeal to those who have subscribed, asking them to take their subscriptions to the Glendale avenue branch. After banking hours they may be taken to the office of Mrs. Mercer, 624 East Broadway, or to the Stuart pharmacy, corner Glendale avenue and Broadway.

NEW THEATER GROUND SITE IS BROKEN

$50,000 Playhouse on the South Side Is Assured by Fred Miller

BE READY BY MAY 1

Neighbors of San Fernando and Brand Watch Dirt Fly on Lot

Ground was broken this morning for the new $50,000 theater that is being constructed by Fred Miller, owner of the California theater of Los Angeles, and associates, on San Fernando, near Brand. As the dirt started to fly the neighbors gathered around to see the beginning of what will probably be the greatest constructional feature that has ever been located in the southern end of the city.

The plan of those in charge of this construction work is to have this theater completed and ready for occupancy about May 1. Work will be rushed in every department so that an opening by that date may be effected.

The size of the building will be 70 by 150 feet. It will be semi-mission style in architecture, with stucco exterior and a red tile roof. The theater will have a seating capacity of about 900.

The central 20 feet of the front of this structure will be taken up by the entrance to the theater and on either side of this will be a 25-foot storeroom. The front section of the upper floor will be taken up by offices.

This playhouse will be known as the Gateway Theater. The plans for the house include a beautiful pipe organ to cost about $20,000.

Mrs. Miller of L. A. Wants Glendale to Annex Right Now!

No use fighting annexation now.

Mrs. Miller, who is a resident of Los Angeles, and who is supposed to own lot 15, block A, of the Eulalia tract, has set her seal of disapproval on the present Glendale administration, has denounced the method of operating this city, and has practically stated that the only way Glendale can remain out of the clutches of the bow-wows is to annex to Los Angeles.

An assessment of $1.67 caused the trouble.

This assessment was levied against a lot owned by Mrs. Miller for some local, needed improvement.

"Such an outrageous assessment," said Mrs. Miller in response to the statement of the city employe that the assessment amounted to $1.67. "We don't have any such high taxes in Los Angeles. Why, the lot is not worth that. I would be better off to give it away. I don't blame the people of Glendale for wanting to annex to Los Angeles and I am going out to get every vote I can for annexation."

So there now.

EXCHANGE CLUB INAUGURATES OFFICERS

Postmaster Jackson Is Seaed as President at Wednesday Meeting

The meeting of the Exchange club on Wednesday was in the nature of an inauguration of the officers elected at the meeting previous, viz: Postmaster D. Ripley Jackson, president; George Whitaker, vice-president; George H. Thomas, treasurer; and members of the board of directors which includes Dr. Henry R. Harrower, W. C. Waring, E. B. Sutton, Dr. J. B. Kelly and Secretary J. Howarth, who has just been appointed to succeed himself, the assistant secretary, William H. Black receiving a gold pencil.

Each recipient made a little speech of acknowledgement. President Jackson outlined his ambitions for the club the coming year, declaring that club membership is an investment that pays dividends in fellowship and social pleasure in proportion to that which is contributed.

Three applications for membership were received and referred to the board of directors which will meet Monday at 2 o'clock to make committee appointments which will be reported at the next meeting.

The club voted to extend attendance courtesies to a representative of each Glendale daily paper without charge.

The next regular meeting will be devoted to business and the consideration of a general program for the year.

The club has a membership of about 40 and once a month the ladies in the families of members are entertained.

REGISTRATION TO PREVENT ANNEXATION ELECTION NOW BEGINS IN GLENDALE

WARNING OF THE GLENDALE DAILY PRESS IS SIGNAL FOR RISING OF THOSE NOT ON THE BOOKS TO ASSIST; SENTIMENT AGAINST ANNEXATION CONTINUES EXPRESSION

REGISTER NOW AGAINST ANNEXATION

REGISTRARS:

Mrs. Grace E. Holman .....533 West California
Mrs. M. E. Myton .....612 East Broadway
L. W. Ball .....363 West Elk
Mrs. Harry Greenwalt .....408 Oak
Mrs. F. M. Ryan .....332 West Acacia
F. S. MacDougall .....453 West Colorado
W. Q. Widdows .....Glendale Daily Press

The effect of the increased registration on the list of voters of Glendale as a result of the call issued by the Glendale Daily Press has been most pronounced.

It is reported that several of the circulators of the petitions for annexation have thrown up the work, being unable to make any progress.

The voters who have changed their residences since last registering for election should go to the nearest registrar and again enroll so that they may be ready to vote should an annexation election be forced.

Unless voters are registered, of course they cannot vote in the election.

It is repeated that one of the best ways to prevent an election is to enroll as a voter before any one of the official registrars whose addresses are given here. For every four such registrations the annexationists must have one more name on their petition, since they must have 25 per cent of the total vote registered on the voters' list of the county in this district, on their petitions, in order to secure a call for an annexation election.

The books of the county registrar are open for the enrollment of all voters now and will remain open for some time. It is really the duty of every citizen to be on the voting list of his district so that he may not be caught disqualified when a measure of importance is developed.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gray, 533 North Isabel street: "We are not in favor of annexing Glendale to Los Angeles. We fail to see where Glendale would gain anything and it would also lose its identity. What is the use of giving Los Angeles a perfectly good, prosperous city like Glendale?"

Mrs. W. C. Reith, 1101 East Wilson avenue: "I do not think that Glendale should annex to Los Angeles. When the matter first came up I thought that perhaps it might be a good thing, but I have changed my mind. I do not believe that Glendale would gain anything and would have everything to lose."

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Esterly, 545 North Adams street: "We are opposed to annexing Glendale to Los Angeles. We do not think that Los Angeles has anything that it can give to Glendale and for that reason do not favor annexation."

Richard Gilbert, 622 South Columbus avenue: "There is 'nothing doing' on the annexation question as far as I am concerned. I am strong for Glendale as Glendale. I am opposed to annexing Glendale to Los Angeles on the grounds that we are taking care of ourselves very nicely as an independent city. There is no city anywhere that is doing as well as we are and Los Angeles, while it is a great city, has more than it can take care of now. If we became a part of it we would not be taken care of as well as we are now."

Mrs. Ella C. Thompson, 505 South Central avenue: "I am most emphatically against annexation to Los Angeles. There are so many reasons why we should not. None why we should."

GOTHAM DONS ITS WINTER COAT OF SNOW

5 Inches Fall in Blanket Which Blocks Traffic

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Two persons were killed, traffic was suspended in some parts of the city and ships were held in port as New York was blanketed with a five-inch snow today.

Hundreds of men were given employment as shovelers to open main traffic arteries. Hundreds more unemployed persons crowded into welfare refuges.

A hundred families clad in night clothing were driven to the street during the storm when fire starting in a Washington street box factory spread to a four-story tenement and endangered surrounding apartment houses. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

The snow fall was so dense that several large ships outside the harbor were forced to drop anchor, as the helmsmen could only see a few feet ahead.

BOOZE PARLOR PATRONS NOW ARRESTED

State Prohibition Director Declares All Guests Liable

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—Patrons of cafes as well as proprietors will be arrested in prohibition raids hereafter, Samuel Rutter, prohibition director, declared today, if cafe proprietors when arrested present the defense that liquor seized belonged to guests and not to them.

"We will see how many people take chances on patronizing cafes where bootlegging is indulged in if they know they are going to be arrested in case of a raid," Rutter declared.

He explained that in the past only proprietors had been arrested and patrons were permitted to go unmolested.

"Some of them who have been present at raids have got quite a kick out of it," Rutter commented.

The committee in charge of the transferring of these subscriptions is working from daylight until after dark. There are ten different crews working on the transferring of the subscriptions at the present time.

CONFESSED BANDIT REMOVED TO L. A. COUNTY JAIL

Ralph Geyer, Arrested by Patrolman Conners, Proves Bad Man

Ralph Geyer, alias James Bennett, R. W. Cogswell and George Maynard, who was arrested in Glendale Sunday night and who has confessed, according to Chief Fraser, to a number of crimes in Los Angeles and Chicago, was taken to the county jail in Los Angeles, last night. This action was taken as a precautionary measure, the idea being to eliminate all chance of Geyer escaping and thereby evading justice.

Irick Vaughn, who was arrested along with Geyer, was released yesterday by Chief Fraser. Local police officials believe that Vaughn was simply a tool of Geyer.

LOUSIANA IS IN WHIRL OF EMOTION

BASTROP, LA., Jan. 4.—Morehouse parish was divided into two camps today as forces of the law were marshalled for an onslaught on lawlessness.

Mixed emotions, of suspense, of incredulity and suspicion were evinced by citizens of the community on the eve of the open hearing at which state officials expect to place the blame for a reign of terror, climaxed when a masked mob murdered Watt Daniels and Thomas Richards last August.

One faction, alleged by state authorities to be sympathizers of the Klu Klux Klan, was outspoken with predictions that the hearing would fall flat for lack of evidence.

Scores of citizens, admittedly hostile to the "invisible empire," sided with the state.

Vehicles of all sorts were bringing people from the surrounding country to Bastrop for tomorrow's hearing.

They were plainly concerned about the result. Wives, mothers and sisters accompanied their men folk to town with apprehension.

CALGARY, Alta.—John W. Lucas of Cayley, Alta. was crowned rye king of North America when he won the grand sweepstakes at the International Livestock and Grain Show in Chicago recently.

SURVIVORS TELL OF HORROR IN TRAGEDY OF COWLITZ BRIDGE

Believed Eighty Will Be Total Number Lost in the Collapse of Bridge Over Swollen River

WORD PICTURE OF DISASTER

Cable Breaks, Precipitating Men, Women, Children, Automobiles and Trucks Into Racing Stream

By FRANK A. CLARVOE

KELSO, Wash., Jan. 4.—Still stunned with grief, their faces reflecting the grayness of a cold dawn of tragedy's aftermath, men and women of Kelso patrolled the banks of the Cowlitz river this morning, endeavoring to wrest from the swollen, angry stream its secret of death and disaster.

Of the 150 people on the suspension bridge when the supporting cable snapped, one man is dead as a result of injuries sustained when two giant timbers crushed him in their fall.

The known list of dead and missing follows:

G. O. McDonald, died early today in a hospital.

A school bus bringing 26 children home from school was among the motor vehicles plunged into the river by the bridge's collapse, Al Walthrop of Portland, declared.

Walthrop saw four of the children rescued. He had no idea of the fate of the others.

"I was walking near the east end of the bridge when the cable snapped," Walthrop said today. "It was exactly 4:55 p. m. I saw what was going to happen and started to the station and yelled for help.

"I got out of it myself and was on the steamer Cowlitz when she started rescue work. I saw the school bus with about 26 children in it go down and four of the children were rescued.

"A lot of people went down the river because we could not reach them in time. I saw one man raise up his hands and scream for help and then go down. When we got to where he was there was no trace of him."

R. H. Oswalt, who is in the hospital here with a broken arm, tells a graphic story of his fight for life in the Cowlitz river when the fallen Kelso bridge hurled him into the stream.

Oswalt, who is an employee of the Long Bell Lumber company, was on his way from work and was on the long span of the bridge, when, without any noticeable warning, the whole structure toppled into the river.

"I was on the long span," Oswalt told the United Press this morning. "I heard no warning crack. Suddenly the whole span tipped and I was thrown into the river. Timbers fell and crashed about me. I was carried to the bottom by the fallen wreckage but how long I was under water I cannot say.

"I fought my way to the surface but the timbers rolled about and over me as I struggled to climb upon them. I was pinned between two timbers and expected to be crushed to death but they finally caught in a cable and turning over, threw me up on the top side.

"By this time the wreckage had drifted to the new bridge and hung there. Some one on the west side of the steel bridge grabbed me and pulled me to safety."

Another survivor, W. M. Sullivan, who is also a Long Bell employee and who is in the hospital with his legs crushed and broken in two places, was forced to fight off the clinging holds of other victims, who clung to him in their desperate struggle for life.

Sullivan had been riding on a truck but at the west end of the bridge he alighted as the road was crowded with automobiles, "bumper to bumper."

"I thought I could make better progress afoot," he said, "and was on the middle span, dodging between automobiles, when I heard a crack similar to the report of a .22-caliber rifle."

He had just met a team of horses, hauling a wagon from the east side and cannot recall anything until he was struggling in the water.

Like Oswalt, he was surrounded by the heavy falling timbers, which were all about him, grinding and crushing together in the current. Sullivan, although his legs were crushed, succeeded in grasping a piece of wreckage.

"I was almost exhausted," said Sullivan today, "but I held on. I could feel some one grasp me and my hold on the timber was almost broken. Suddenly my piece of wreckage was shot to the surface and in the struggle the person who was grasping me lost hold and I was alone on the timber. A boat picked me up. I did not see anyone near me struggling in the water, although I heard many cries. I was close to two sunken automobiles when I came to the surface and could hear calls for help coming from the people inside them. One was a closed car and a man in it appeared to be calling to his companion, who was trapped."

Authorities believe the death toll will run as high as eighty.

The bridge, built in 1907, was a timber constructed suspension type. For two weeks it has been subjected to the pressure of a jam of logs which had broken loose and jammed against the piers. Officers had been stationed at the approaches to regulate traffic. Wednesday evening, when the bridge was crowded to capacity by men returning from work, a suspending cable running through truckle blocks at the top of the east end towers snapped with a loud report. Between the towers a jackknife draw was supported, and when the east end cable snapped, releasing the tension at the west end, three supporting towers splintered, and toppled into the river, much of the wreckage jamming against the abutments of a new steel bridge a short distance down stream.

The draw opened like a trap door, those persons upon it slipping into the water twenty feet below. The middle span, between 200 and 300 feet in length, flipped over and threw ten automobiles and trucks, a two horse team, and scores of pedestrians into the swollen Cowlitz, hurling tower timbers and roadway planking on top of them.

Some of the fallen timbers offered a means of escape to those struggling in the water, who grasped them and remained afloat until help arrived, but in many other cases the wreckage crushed life from the terrified victims.

The wreckage was immediately made fast to the new bridge in the hope that the imprisoned bodies of the dead could be saved from the swirling current and recovered. River steamers and launches poked their noses against wreckage and all night rescue parties worked to recover bodies. They were hampered by darkness and the high water, which, due to recent warm, heavy rains is fifteen feet higher than normal.

At dawn the work of searching the river was begun with hope that all bodies still in the vicinity will be recovered.

DRAMA SECTION OF HI SELECTS EIGHT PLAYS

To Be Used for Study Recitals During February and March

Mr. Brewster, head of the dramatic section of the English Department at Glendale High has selected eight one-act plays which will be presented in two or three recitals to be given in February or March and which will use all students in the section. Some tentative assignments of parts have been made but until there is a try-out no announcements of the casts will be made. The plays are: "The Play Goers" by Arthur Pinero, "The Dream Stone" by Eric Lyall, "Enter Dora, Exit Dad" by Freeman Tilden, "The Silly Ass" by Adelaide C. Rowell, "Hyacinths" by Tacie May Hanna, "The Lady Loses Her Hoop" a phantasy, by Leisa Graham Wilson, and "The Professional" by Stuart Walker.

Mr. Brewster had accepted the part of Sir Arthur Surface in Sheridan's "School for Scandal," to be presented by the Community Players of Pasadena, but on account of the work he will have to do in connection with debates in which Glendale High will be represented and the class night of seniors who will be graduated in February, he has relinquished it. He played with Mr. Browne of the Community Players for almost a whole season and it is quite a disappointment to him to give it up.

The try-out for the coming debate in the Southern California League will be given next Friday night when teams will be selected. Glendale is to have both an affirmative and a negative team who will debate the same evening. The league mentioned is composed of the larger high schools of Southern California. The school will also compete in the Central League and Miss Corry went Wednesday afternoon to Alhambra to meet representatives of other schools in that league and decide upon dates on which debates will be held.

The theme of the first debate in the Southern California League will be: "Resolved, That the French war loan be cancelled."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK—

By E. R. WAITE
Secretary Shawnee, Oklahoma, Board of Commerce

THAT the retailer, jobber and manufacturer should be leaders of thought in their city.

THAT they have very definite obligations to the city in which they live.

THAT everything that bears upon the welfare of their city should receive their careful consideration and attention.

THAT upon their shoulders depends much that must be done toward making their city a bigger and busier city.

THAT a good city in which to live is one where the people dwell in peace, unity and good fellowship, regardless of the different views they may have, and where the business men are broad-minded, hospitable and progressive.

THAT your business men believe that QUALITY PLUS ADVERTISING PLUS SERVICE BRINGS SUCCESS. Many cities should pay more attention to business and less to WILD-EYED POLITICIANS.

THAT every city has opportunities for men of capital, energy and vision. They will never know of your city unless you proudly tell of it. ADVERTISE!!!

THAT your city wants men of initiative and intelligence to come and live in your city. ADVERTISE!!

THAT HOW IS THE WORLD TO KNOW THAT IN YOUR CITY CAN BE FOUND HEALTH, HAPPINESS, PROSPERITY AND AN IDEAL PLACE IN WHICH TO LIVE, UNLESS YOU ADVERTISE AND TELL THE STORY OF YOUR CITY?

LIGHT CAR MAY SOLVE TRAFFIC PROBLEMS

"Star" Representative Here Has New Point of View

"The real traffic problem is being brought about by light cars," according to a statement made by Dilley and Armstrong of the local "Star" agency, which opens for business next Friday at 115 W. Harvard. "This is because the common people in vast numbers are buying cars that are low in price, economical to operate, and slow to depreciate. Even men of considerable capital are turning to light cars because they get practically the same results out of the lighter cars and at a great saving of expense and outlay in investment.

"This is what actuated W. C. Durant, famous builder of motors, to create the Star. It helps to fill a widely popular demand.

"Because of the fact that the masses are buying low priced cars," continued Dilley and Armstrong, "you may look for generous support for any move that will relieve the new traffic problems that have arisen; because these people will ride in constantly increasing numbers, now that cars may be purchased and run so economically. The Star car will give better than 26 miles per gallon of gasoline consumed, while the oil consumption is so small that it is hardly noticeable per 100 miles of road travel."

MUTUAL BENEFIT READING CIRCLE MEETS

The regular meeting of the Mutual Benefit Reading Circle, of which Mrs. A. A. Barton is president, was held Wednesday at the library. The review was given by Mrs. D. F. Reichard on "National Education," and was followed by considerable discussion. A letter was read from Mrs. Charles H. Toll, founder of the Circle, thanking the members for flowers sent at Christmas time.

Mrs. Barton announced that $4.71 had been left over from the Circle picture fund and it was decided that this would be turned over to the library to start a picture fund for the library. At the next Circle meeting a cake sale will be held to secure money for completing payments on chairs recently purchased. The circle now has a paid membership of 166. The reading of the book, "A School Master in a Great City" by Angelo Patri was continued by Mrs. Barton.

OAKLAND GETS BEAUTIFUL NECKLACE

OAKLAND, Calif., Jan. 3.—The city of Oakland has received from groups of its citizens a beautiful necklace, which will be worn in public continually. The necklace idea was suggested last June and the funds for the purchase of the glittering decoration were ready by Christmas.

The municipal necklace will be a system of 232 electroliers which will completely encircle Lake Merritt, the lovely body of water in the heart of the city. It will blaze at night like the diamond tiepe on the neck of the queen at the opera.

When the project was first suggested last spring, only 206 electroliers were asked. Civic clubs and various organizations were asked to subscribe funds for one light each. The response was much greater than was anticipated and 232 organizations and individuals have put into the hands of the city officials funds for the unique chain.

Work on the project will be commenced immediately and prizes aggregating $2000 will be awarded to designers of the best lights.

Glendale listeners in on radiophones New Year's eve greatly enjoyed the concert broadcasted by the Times station, especially the vocal numbers by Albert Bryant, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Bryant of this city. He has a beautiful fresh young tenor voice, and is a great favorite in radioland. He likewise sang Christmas eve and has been deluged with letters from all parts of the country, the majority coming from points east of the rockies. One was from South Carolina, one from Virginia and one from far away Maine, all testifying to pleasure in his performance and the wonderful clearness of his enunciation, particularly in "That Little Mother of Mine." Miss Vickers, his instructor, acted as his accompanist. He plans to be a professional singer.

SEATTLE'S 'BUM' IS OLD FIRE HORSE

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 3.—Pedestrians stopping in front of the Blue Mouse theater here every afternoon at 2 o'clock are not necessarily contemplating the performance in the theater. Many are there to witness the performance on the street outside.

The idler can see Frank Groppenbacher, the theater doorman, watching the street surreptitiously, then step to the curb as an intelligent-looking, riderless horse walks up in a businesslike way. The horse is "Bum," the property of the police department, ridden by Traffic Policeman Gay. "Bum," however, has a fondness for the Blue Mouse doorman.

When his master dismounts to inspect the automobiles parked along the street, "Bum" walks leisurely down Fifth avenue to where Groppenbacher awaits his coming. There is always sugar for "Bum" who stays and gossips silently with his friend until his master comes to claim him.

FOSSIL BONES ARE FOUND IN NORTH CAROLINA

ENFIELD, N. C., Jan. 4.—The bones of what is generally believed to have been a giant plesiosarus, which ranged this section of the country hundreds of years ago, have been found near here.

The huge skeleton, parts of which have been unearthed by farmers near here, is petrified, and is believed to have been a member of the now extinct animal family that made its home in the Florida Everglades and ranged northward in search of food, nearly 200,000 years ago.

Archaeological experts differ over what family of extinct animals the skeleton belongs. Dr. Collier Cobb, University of North Carolina expert, who viewed the bones, said they were the remains of a whale, schools of which are said to have frequented this part of the country when it was under water, over 250,000 years ago.

Green for Millinery

Lanvin green is much in evidence in millinery displays.

THE NEW YEAR EDITION OF YOUR NEWSPAPER

The New Year's number of the Glendale Daily Press, with its facts about this city, made such an instantaneous hit that it seemed yesterday that the 8,500 copies would be insufficient to meet the demand.

Said Harry A. James: "Glendale has reason to be proud of a newspaper that can produce such an edition as that published by the Press January 1. I doubt if there is a city of the same population in the whole United States that has a newspaper plant equipped to put out such a splendid special edition. Many cities are judged solely by their newspapers and we in Glendale need have no hesitancy in mailing a Glendale Press to any part of the world."

"The Glendale Press grows better day by day in every way," is the statement of Mrs. R. Service, 131 West Maple street.

Mrs. Service is an old subscriber, in fact she has taken the Press ever since its organization in Glendale, and she wouldn't be without it. "Its supremacy is outstanding," she states, "and the last two numbers were wonderful. I have sent copies to all of my friends and I know they will appreciate them fully as well as I did." Mr. Service has one of the insurance policies of this paper and declares it to be wonderful insurance and he would not be without it.

BOOTLEG LIQUOR REAPS HARVEST OF DEATH

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Deaths due to alcoholism, or poison "booze" have increased more than 100 per cent in Chicago, since the advent of prohibition, according to figures compiled at the psychopathic hospital here by Dr. James Whitney Hall.

"Before the Volstead act was put in effect deaths from alcoholism averaged seven or eight yearly," Hall said. "During the first nine months of 1922 22 persons died from bad booze.

"Not only is it taking life, but insanity, traceable to alcoholism, has doubled since the dry law was passed. More than 150 people go insane in Cook county weekly as compared to sixty or seventy in pre-dry times."

An Identification Mark

When immersing a spotted garment in gasoline it is well to run a basting thread around the badly soiled spots that particular attention may be paid to them. Use light thread on dark material and vice versa.

MATTISON B. JONES HEARTH FIRES ARE KINDLED BY FRIENDS

Most Brilliant Reception of Years Marks Housewarming on Kenneth Road on Twenty-third Anniversary of Wedding

By GERTRUDE GIBBS

It seemed fitting that the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Mattison B. Jones on Kenneth road and Highland avenue, typical as it is of the old-time southern mansion expressive of dignity and comfort, should on Wednesday night, when its doors were first opened to a wide circle of friends, be the scene of a lavish hospitality for which the south has always been famed. It was one of the most brilliant social affairs that has ever been given in Glendale.

Invitations to the number of 600 had been issued and between 300 and 400 came to greet host and hostess and congratulate them on the 23d anniversary of their marriage, of which the reception was a celebration, all bringing an eager interest in the new and unusual house.

Seated on a knoll well back from the highway and approached by a circular driveway, its situation is ideal, commanding as it does a far reaching view of the San Fernando valley to the south and west, the Griffith Park hills, the city of Glendale at the mouth of the valley, the Verdugo Hills to the north. Visitors lingered beside the tall columns supporting the roof of the semi-circular, brick paved entrance porch, loth to relinquish the enchanting view and pass through the hospitable doors.

Within, however, there was so much of interest and beauty, so congenial was the comany that the majority lingered until a late hour, enjoying the musical program provided and the social contact with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, their daughter Winifred Jones, and Mrs. Smith, mother of Mrs. Jones, received their guests in the handsome drawing room at the left of the entrance hall, Mrs. Jones being gowned in a handsome apricot colored evening dress, her daughter in black velvet, Mrs. Smith also in black, the three ladies having orchid corsage boquets.

In receiving lines in the hall as assisting hosts and hostesses were: Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Phillips of Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Evans of Glendale, brothers-in-law and sisters of the hostess; Mrs. Charles H. Toll, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Campbell, Mayor and Mrs. Spencer Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Roberts, Miss Winifred and Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Dockweiler, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Weirick, Dr. and Mrs. Harry M. Marx Miller, Mrs. Charles A. Parker, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Arnold, Mrs. A. M. Draper, Mrs. John Cole, Mrs. William Hopkins.

At intervals the artists contributing to a delightful musical program which had been arranged by Mrs. Warren Roberts, were heard in the drawing room, including the Nevin vocal quartet, composed of Mrs. Florence Parker, Mrs. A. M. Draper, Mrs. John Cole and Mrs. Frank Arnold, with Miss Gertrude Champlain at the piano, and Mrs. Enona Hopkins at the harp, Mayor Spencer Robinson sang, accompanied by Mrs. Robinson; Colin Campbell, a wonderful pianist, who is thought by some to rival Josef Hofmann, played most wonderfully a Liszt number. Mrs. Hopkins also played solo harp numbers.

At the close of the program Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher addressed Mr. and Mrs. Jones, saying he had been commissioned to bring to them the good wishes, affection and felicitations of Temple Baptist Church of Los Angeles, of which he is pastor and of which they have been members for many years. Said he: "It has been my privilege to have known Mr. and Mrs. Jones and their daughter for 13 or 14 years and to really be a member of the family, for I have regarded them as brother, sister and daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have lived happily for 23 years, a truly remarkable thing, and I hope they will live as happily for 23 more years and that I may be with them to celebrate that occasion and kiss the bride. To me it is a greater pleasure to greet Mr. Jones here, standing for the things he has always stood for, than to see him in the Governor's chair at Sacramento, perhaps standing for other things." (applause).

On behalf of the Glendale Commandery, Knights Templar, Dr. Brougher then presented to Mrs. Jones a beautiful silver tray, with the congratulations of the Commandery.

Mr. Behymer confided to host and hostess and later to the company that it was the 37th anniversary of his wedding to Mrs. Behymer who was prevented by illness from accompanying him.

Mrs. Jones thanked Dr. Brougher for his personal greetings and those of Temple Baptist Church, and Mr. Jones did likewise, also thanking his fellow knights for the beautiful gift to Mrs. Jones, saying: "We expect to go to 110. It is a great pleasure to us to have you here in our home, and it is pleasing to us to celebrate in this way our anniversary. Twenty-three years ago tonight we boarded a train for California, reaching Los Angeles January 8. We have been residents here ever since and they have been happy years. We hope you will realize that the latchstring of the Jones house is always on the outside."

Mayor Robinson, not to be outdone by a Los Angeles representative, voiced the esteem in which Glendale holds the Jones family and its pleasure in having them as citizens.

The entire house was opened to guests who inspected it with expressions of approval and pleasure, Southerners rejoicing in the many suggestions of the old Southern home, the quaint hand-made fabric rugs, the lantern shaped electric light globes, with pendant prisms, the hand-woven "kiver," which was the gift of Mr. Jones' sister and which had a place of honor on the wicker day-bed in the charming sun room to the west of the drawing room, the old-fashioned brass candlesticks, the big mahogany four-poster, canopied bed, in one of the spacious guest rooms, and other touches that were reminders to those who knew.

It is a house of eleven large rooms. To the left of the entrance hall and opening into it by wide doorways are the drawing room and sun parlor to the west, at the rear of the hall an inviting library and telephone room, and on the right of the hall through another wide doorway, a beautiful dining room with a delightful sunny breakfast room beyond where refreshments of salad, coffee and cake were served to the reception guests, a butler's pantry, affording passageway to the kitchen, laundry porch, maid's room, etc., at the north end.

The upper floor is divided into four sleeping apartments, one a suite of two rooms, and each has its bath. All are beautifully furnished in harmony with the color scheme adopted for each.

The walls below stairs are painted in soft neutral tints, the white panels of the drawing room walls framed in gray, which is repeated in darker tone in a large taupe-colored rug, in overstuffed chairs and Davenport upholstered in velvet, and in the creamy gray of the beautiful marble fireplace. The note of bright color is supplied by the silken hangings of rose and blue at the long windows, and was accentuated in the great bowls of roses which were everywhere present throughout the house.

Mahogany is used in the furnishings of the dining room, but in the breakfast nook a gayer note is struck in the chintz hangings and flower painted table and chairs.

SEN. ROBINSON STIRS SENATE TO DEBATE

By LAWRENCE MARTIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Senator Robinson's demand that the United States be officially represented on the reparations commission was expected to reopen senate debate today on the international situation. Robinson was scheduled to explain his bill in a brief speech and so great is the interest now in the senate on this and kindred questions, that general discussion was expected to follow.

Meanwhile, amid great secrecy, Ambassador George Harvey is carrying on his conference on the European situation with President Harding, Secretary of State Hughes and other administration officials and leaders in congress.

Robinson's bill is a second step in a program to try to "pin down" the administration to a definite foreign policy, by a process of elimination. Democrats and a few republicans are working together on this. The Borah amendment to the naval bill for an economic conference was the first step.

Borah, by means of that measure, brought to light definite information concerning the administration's position on European economics. Now Robinson is attempting to go a step further and put the administration on record as either favoring or opposing American official membership on the reparations commission. In advance of any word from the White House as to its attitude toward the Robinson bill, republican leaders said they would not let it pass. They will brand it as an effort to embarrass President Harding and Secretary Hughes in the conduct of foreign affairs.

GENERAL ALARM FOR MISSING COUPLE

An effort is being made by the Glendale police department to locate Miss Grace Minkler of Glendale, who, according to local police records, is suspected of eloping with Hans Larsen, an acquaintance of the Minkler family. The theory on which the police are working is that Miss Minkler and Larsen are on their way to Norway. Bulletins have been sent by the local department to Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco, asking the police of those cities to be on the lookout for the pair.

The search was started by Mrs. Grace Minkler, who called at the Glendale police department and asked that an effort be made to locate Larsen and the girl.

Indifference is about the only thing capable of freezing the milk of human kindness.

COLLEGE WOMEN'S CLUB GAINS IN ORGANIZATION

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the organization of the new Glendale College Women's Club, which promises to play a very active part in Glendale's social and civic life. With plans going ahead for the organization of this club all women who are interested and eligible are asked to get in touch with one of the following women: Mrs. Warren Roberts, Glendale 772-W; Mrs. Helen Moir, Glendale 2407-J; or Mrs. A. L. Ferguson, Glendale 905-M.

Rules for entrance, as adopted at a preliminary meeting held at the home of Mrs. Ferguson in December, will be the same as those used by the University Women's Club of Los Angeles, namely: Any woman may be eligible to membership who has sixty university credits or who has taken two years of full academic work in any college or university, a four years' course and granting a degree of A. B. Any woman in Glendale and nearby territory is welcome who can meet these requirements.

The first meeting of this new club will be in the form of a tea to be held at the home of Mrs. Warren Roberts, 617 East Elk avenue, Saturday afternoon, January 20, at 2:30 o'clock. All present at this meeting will be considered as charter members and the usual procedure to form a permanent club will follow.

GREATEST SNOWFALL

The greatest snowfall in the United States occurs in the Sierra Nevada and Cascade mountain ranges of the Pacific coast states, according to the weather bureau of the department of agriculture. At some places in these mountains from 30 to 40 feet of snow falls during the winter season. At Summit, California, which has an elevation of about 7,000 feet above the sea level, nearly 60 feet of snow has been recorded in a single season. About 25 feet of this snow fell during one month.

It doesn't pay to spend money just to show that you have it.

"THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH"

There will come a time perhaps when a woman will sit as a Justice in the Supreme Court of the United States. Perhaps that woman will be Florence Allen of Cleveland.

Two years ago she attained the distinction of becoming the first woman judge in America. She was elected to the Cleveland Court of Common Pleas on a non-partisan ticket. A few weeks ago she was elevated by the vote of the people of Ohio to the State Supreme Court. Shortly she will take her new office.

And before her lies that sacred tribunal in Washington, D. C. Will she ever reach it?

Miss Allen, of course, has a great obstacle to clear. Old age seems to be one of the requirements for eligibility to the United States Supreme Court. Miss Allen is young. My impression is that no man less than sixty has ever been appointed to the bench of the Supreme Court.

Miss Allen has made enormous strides in two years. She has written a new chapter into the political history of women. It is an interesting chapter. Among other things Miss Allen has sentenced a man to death for murder. No other woman has ever done this.

Miss Allen studied law at New York University. She was a newspaper writer for a while, a teacher and an investigator of immigration conditions. Her experience has been broad; her views are interesting.

Three people came into court late one morning. She put them in jail and made them forfeit their bonds. In the past it has been argued that women would be bad judges on account of their emotional tendencies. Miss Allen proved this is not so.

She believes the young people of today marry too hostily and are ready to quit at the first quarrel. She tells of a young couple who could not agree on a name for their baby. It was their first quarrel; it led to divorce.

Women, she says, make good jurors. She does not believe a disagreeable turn in the testimony should excuse a woman juror from hearing it. She is opposed to capital punishment, but it is the law—she administers it.

There will come a time perhaps when a woman will sit as a Justice in the Supreme Court of the United States. Perhaps that woman will be Miss Allen.

CROUP

"I want a bottle of syrup of ipecac," said a country woman in a drug store one fall evening.

The druggist wrapped it up absent-mindedly, saying as he handed it to her:

"Got some little children at home?"

"One. How did you know?" asked the woman.

"Ipecac. Croup. Babies. All the women buy it nowadays," said the druggist laconically and turned to the next customer.

Threshing was over and the farmers' wives were in town doing the shopping they did about once a year.

"I'm thankful to have that ipecac," said the woman, putting countless purchases into a big holdall and climbing into the wagon beside her husband.

"Still worrying about the baby having croup?" he teased as he cracked the whip and drove his jet black team past the postoffice with a flourish.

"Honestly, Tom, if you were alone with the baby as much as I am you would worry, too." The woman, who was young and anxious looking, flushed a little, but her husband squeezed her arm and said by way of diverting the conversation:

"Get everything you wanted?"

Smiling happily back into his eyes, the woman said, "Everything."

It had been a good year for them.

The baby, at home with the middle-aged woman who lived with the young couple, was asleep when his parents reached the farm.

He woke for his bedtime bath and his usual frolic with his father and was put to bed, apparently well.

At midnight his mother's heart leaped to her throat when she heard, from the sun-porch room where this modern baby slept, the ringing, crowing cough that terror told her must be croup.

It had come. This thing that had stalked her through her small son's placid childhood.

Springing to the floor, she caught up a gown and slippers, woke her husband, turned on the lights and snatched the baby from his crib. He was choking and purple in the face and for the moment his mother lost her head.

"What shall we do?" she wailed. "The fire is out. There is no hot water. It's steam that helps them get their breath back, when they choke like this."

The baby strangled in her arms and beat the air with frightened hands.

"The ipecac, Mary. How much do you give? You give it to him and I'll have hot water in a jiffy. That gas heater works fine."

And though his hands shook till the spoon rattled against the bottle, the young father measured the dose and held the spoon to the baby's bluish lips, not daring to think how almost dead the baby looked.

After the teaspoonful of ipecac had been administered, some warm water was given to the baby, who was too frightened to swallow. But he tried and his mother tried to soothe and comfort him. Then the emetic took effect. The spasm of the muscles of the upper air passages of the throat (for this is what croup is) began to pass.

Hot water was soon obtained and a steam tent fashioned over the baby's bed. But the attack was almost over, thanks to the emetic.

Never meddle with a hornet or a man who is minding his own business.

Truths in Epigram

Though I always am in haste, I am never in a hurry. — John Wesley (1703 - 1791).

Justice, sir, is the great interest of man on earth.—Daniel Webster (1782-1852).

The Public is an old woman. Let her maunder and mumble.—Thomas Carlyle (1795-1881).

ONE WOMAN'S WORK

There has just been dedicated in Los Angeles a beautiful place of worship. It is free from debt, although the cost of the building was $270,000, and the period devoted to raising the funds was brief. The most remarkable feature of the achievement is that it was the work of one woman, Mrs. Aimie S. McPherson. In the beginning she had nothing but a measureless faith, coupled with the belief that she had been chosen to be an evangelist. She has for years traveled about the country preaching the gospel. She addressed crowds in the open air until enabled to procure a tent. Often this tent had to serve also as her home. On more than one occasion there had seemed likelihood that she and her little family, the congregation having been dismissed, would have to retire hungry. Something always intervened to prevent this. Steadily grew her faith in her mission.

Coming to southern California she elected to make this her home. A woman who heard her preach gave her a lot on which to build a dwelling. Later, as the number of her followers increased, a site was purchased for a great temple, and soon after, the imposing structure began to take shape. The work progressed without pause, funds being available as needed. Now it is complete. The success of the undertaking must be deemed far out of the ordinary.

Concerning the ministry of Mrs. McPherson, there may be differences of opinion, but that it has aroused the interest of so many is vindication enough for it. Men and women desire to worship God; this is instinctive. Some of them find themselves hampered by denominational creeds. Such welcomed the opportunity given by the faith, the optimism and the magnetic power of Mrs. McPherson. They even go so far as to hold that she can perform miracles. The outsider, albeit friendly, will decline to go so far; yet the erection of a great temple by her influence alone, seems to fall little short of the miraculous.

MADNESS OF MANKIND

Red Cross men have given a report concerning atrocities committed by the Greek army in Anatolia. The facts are deplorable and astounding. In some mysterious way they were long in coming to light. An impression had been created, palpably by design, that the nameless outrages marking the brief war between the Greeks and Turks had all been due to the latter. The evidence is that the Greeks were as bad, as ferocious, as wanton and as indiscriminate in butchery and rapine, as their enemies ever had been. This is startling enough, and yet the horror of it is accentuated by the circumstance that a renewal of the war is planned. This could not be without the assent and connivance of other powers. Greece is sent to draw chestnuts out of the fire. It will be burned; its portion of chestnuts will be small.

Europe seems to be pervaded by a type of madness. Europeans call uopn America for aid, but apparently without a thought of the necessity or the possibility of helping themselves. Were they to abandon their war lust, and place as aforetime, a value upon seedtime and harvest, hope on their behalf would be stimulated. Russia, so far as it is an influence is an influence wholly for mischief. Germany is nursing a deadly hatred, and some of the allies appear to be doing their best to keep this hatred alive. They give no heed to the certainty that what they are sowing today their children will reap on the morrow.

The game of grab seems to be in full swing. The idea that great nations should stand poised to strike because of a squabble over oil fields, takes the pathos out of the exhibition, making it a sordid and repellant display of greed, and having no relation to patriotism. If grasping diplomacy and military aggressiveness combine and prevail, Europe is nearing the ruin that its present leaders will not see. They are mad. If similar madness dominates the thought of mankind in general, Europe, is close to a greater catastrophe than has yet been its lot to meet.

AFTER THE TOURNAMENT

Too much could not be said in praise of the Tournament of Roses, the spirit that inspires it, the beauty of the event itself, and the pleasure it gives to many thousands. Now that the parade is over for 1923, that it has been a flawless success, unrivaled in splendor of color and artistry of arrangement, it is natural to ask as to what really has been accomplished.

In the first place there has been demonstrated the potency of unselfish civic devotion. Men and women, busy, too, with their own affairs, give freely of their energy to render this yearly spectacle magnificent. No commercial element enters into the matter. The funds raised go to promoting the impressiveness of the day. So has there been builded a great stadium, useful not only at New Year's but throughout the four seasons. So it is that inducements may be offered such as bring the best football teams, across a continent if necessary. The Tournament of Roses gives to Pasadena itself a central interest, keeping awake and alert that local pride upon which the shaping of a city's future depends.

But the benefit is to all of southern California. A demonstration that in one of its fair cities it is possible to display in the open in mid-winter, a mass of floral radiance fresh from the garden, is deeply significant of conditions. It proves facts that, unbolstered by visible evidence, there would be disinclination to accept at a distance. It is the most worthy and profitable type of propaganda, and yet this was not the original design. In the beginning the festival was for enjoyment, and the utility of it had not made appeal.

Considered merely as a spectable the Tournament is worth coming far to see. Year by year it attracts greater throngs. The visitors go their ways satisfied, delighted, and if from the frigid belt, much enlightened.

Editor Brisbane is in a pickle. He likes to praise Tchitcherin, and he has formed the habit of extolling Lloyd George as one of the world's great. Now George has stated in his letters that Brisbane is under obligations to praise, that Tchitcherin is the "spirit of mischief incarnate." Doubtless in this estimate George is correct. He must have written the line without a thought as to how he was bound by it to embarrass a worthy and wordy editor.

New Year's was celebrated even more generally than usual in the large cities of the coast. In most instances the circumstances required the observance to be conducted without inebriation in other days, often the main feature. Many persons doubtless realized for the first time that it was possible for them to enjoy themselves without getting drunk.

Colonel Harvey, back from England, says that the British intend to pay their war debt in full. This was about all he would tell the New York reporters; and they already knew it.

Learning From Charles Edward

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Charles Edward is the ruler of a small kingdom in a certain town. His subjects are his father, his mother, the hired girl and the man who does odd jobs around the house.

Dr. Frank Crane

I go to this house sometimes and am quite interested in watching what takes place. The grown-ups think they are teaching him. Really Charles Edward is teaching them. Some of the things that I have found out from him, for he also teaches me, are as follows:

In the first place, Charles Edward thinks that it is perfectly foolish for people to eat at certain fixed times of the day. Why not eat when you are hungry, and what is the use of sitting down to the table when you are not hungry? Also why at table any time? Why not just go to the cupboard and get what you want and carry it about the house eating it? That is the way dogs do and other animals and they are healthier than we. Herein Charles Edward agrees with Oliver Wendell Holmes, who said that one of the surest signs of old age was eating at certain stated intervals.

Charles Edward is also entirely persuaded as to the folly of washing so much. He cannot see the sense of this eternal scrubbing behind the ears and bathing and picking at his finger nails.

Charles Edward does not see any particular sense in undressing when you want to sleep. He prefers to go to sleep fully dressed listening to a story, sitting on a chair or standing in the corner. He is usually undressed after he has fallen asleep instead of before. Undressing is a nuisance, anyway, and it is much better to have it performed while you are unconscious.

Charles Edward finds it difficult to get over his surprise at the fact that grown-ups want to keep still. They make entirely too much of quiet. He prefers a noise, preferably a loud noise, but any kind of a noise will do. He seems to find it difficult to speak in a low tone.

He also does not understand the desire of grown-ups to be continually sitting down. As for him, he prefers to jump and run constantly.

Charles Edward does not understand why girls were created. They only annoy him. He likes dogs much better. Girls are finicky and bothersome. They don't like to fight and they are always putting on airs.

Charles Edward is very much in favor of Christmas. The idea of everybody giving everybody else presents appeals to him. The only trouble with the custom is that it is confined to one day in the year. He confided to me the other day that he did not understand why he could not have Christmas every day. There is something in that.

Charles Edward is very much puzzled to understand why anybody lives in the city. There is no grass, there are no trees, there is no sand nor water. There is nothing but streets where his mother will not let him play, and stuffy houses where there is little fun to be had.

Charles Edward's idea of life is that it is a place where one can have fun. He goes at this in the most simple and direct of ways. He does not want to do anything that does not amuse him. Grown-ups go at the matter in a much more complex manner and are not generally so successful as Charles Edward.

The accepted idea of the sweet and gentle and forgiving mother and the stern father has no place in Charles Edward's beliefs. His father is his companion in crime and is always ready to second him in any sort of an adventure, including eating what he should not and stealing things when he cannot get them honestly. His mother is the one who makes him walk the chalk. And then his mother is always hugging and kissing him. His father wrestles with him, runs with him and occasionally knocks him down, which suits Charles Edward much better than affection.

Altogether Charles Edward's philosophy of life is interesting whether we approve of it or not.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

Queries on Poetry

Mrs. A. Waters, New York City: "Will you kindly publish in your column what is meant by blank verse, heroic couplet, and Spencerian stanza in literature?"

Answer: Blank verse is verse without rime.

Heroic verse deals with heroic or lofty themes, and is used especially in epic and dramatic poetry. It tells the stories of heroes and demigods. In English the lines are usually written in iambic pentameter (five feet of ten syllables). See the example below.

A couplet is a pair of successive lines of verse, riming together and of the same length.

The heroic couplet, Genung says, is "a rudimental stnaza, which instead of bringing the sense to a final close, or marking a stage in a larger stanza, goes on to observe the massing and limits of the grammatical paragraph; as (from Pope).

'Go! if your ancient, but ignoble blood
Has crept thro' scoundrels ever since the flood,
Go! and pretend your family is young;
Nor own, your fathers have been fools so long.'

. . . . . .

Spenserian (the name should be spelled with an "s," not a "c") stanza is written in eight verses of iambic pentameter (already illustrated) and one Alexandrine verse. The first verse rimes with the third, the second with the fourth, the fifth with the fourth and with the seventh, the sixth with the eighth and with the ninth; as, a b a b b c b c c. The Alexandrine verse is an iambic line, six feet long, the caesural pause being after the third foot. The Spenserian stanza was made famous by Spenser's "Faerie Queene."

Songs of the Poets

Requiescat—By Rosamund Marriott Watson (1863-1911)

Bury me deep when I am dead,
Far from the woods where sweet birds sing;
Lap me in sullen stone and lead,
Lest my poor dust should feel the Spring.

Never a flower be near me set,
Nor starry cup nor slender stem,
Anemone nor violet,
Lest my poor dust remember them.

And you—wherever you may fare—
Dearer than birds, or flowers, or dew
Never, ah me, pass never there,
Lest my poor dust should dream of you.

WORDS THAT HAVE LOST THEIR REPUTATION

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

"Lady" was once a word heard only in the best circles. When by chance it fell from the lips of the great unwashed it was used to describe a woman of birth, breeding and gentle ways. Then somebody, believing apparently that ladyhood was a matter of degree fastened the unfortunate noun to the adjective "perfect." "A perfect lady" thereafter became a term used by every truculent female who resented her limitations, a term connoting nothing of distinction but used loosely by all and sundry to defy the evidence of facts.

The laundress met you with her bundle to inform you that she was a "perfect lady." The char woman defied her employers to prove that she was not ditto. Vulgar women in the slums of great cities screamed to the police who arrested them for drunkenness that they were "perfect ladies" and with oaths invited any doubting Thomas at his peril to prove the contrary.

And so, through association, the word "lady" lost caste, lost it with a rapidity seldom equaled in the history of degradation. And "woman" took its place.

"Refined" followed in the steps of "lady." From being a descriptive adjective with a definite and agreeable meaning it became merely a cheap term bandied about by cheap people who believed a claim to "refinement" made them acceptable where the fact of refinement was non-existent.

We all know how "grand" lost its meaning and its standing. It was separated from its original purport by a host of vulgarians to whom everything from a pair of gold plated earrings to nickle toilet set was "just grand." The result is that now the use of the adjective would even cheapen, to an educated person, a description of that most magnificent of natural phenomena, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

"Elegant," "culture" and "partake" are fast following in the footsteps of "Lady" and "Grand." Society "eats"; imitation society "partakes." "The highest culture" is an expression now common in connection with anybody who has learned the rudiments of ordinary civility. "Elegant" is used as readily to describe an ingrain carpet marked down to $27.50 as to designate the clothing of an East Side beau dressed for a dance at the lodge in a hand-me-down suit and a pink necktie.

And so through the triple mediums of affectation, looseness of speech and exaggeration the degradation of the language proceeds. It's a pity for purity of speech is not only an element of charm. It is a necessary factor in good understanding between men.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

MERCHANT MARINE

[Chicago Tribune]

The United States needs a merchant marine and it cannot have one without government encouragement. Mr. Harding points out that this subsidy arrangement actually saves money. It is hoped that it will give the United States a merchant marine.

The country has stopped spending money for battleship building. When it eliminated that costly competition with other nations it saved money as well as avoided danger. The President says that the direct aid given the American marine will not exceed $20,000,000 a year in addition to the amount now given for the carrying of mail. Shipping board operations now cost $4,000,000 a month and that would be stopped.

The subsidy is an economical plan to give the United States commerce carriers and naval auxiliaries. Half the cost of a battleship will enable the United States to keep up the auxiliary service without which it cannot maintain the place it is intended to have in the naval agreement with Great Britain and Japan.

National security, commerce and economy support the subsidy bill and we believe that the plan the President has submitted and urges is the best that could be given congress. It avoids the wet and dry issue which had no place in it. That is left, as it should be, for treatment otherwise. The rule now is against liquor on American ship. It ought not to be in the subsidy bill and it is not.

Congress should deal honestly with a matter of such national concern and not give the nation something which the President says will be worse than nothing.

QUIT MONKEYING

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat]

Our experience with our constitution justifies us in looking upon it as something sacred, not to be altered without grave consideration, not to be altered at all unless altered conditions clearly and manifestly require it. Frequent amendment without sufficient cause is bound to lower it in public respect, bound to remove that fine spirit of veneration which is its best guardian. And now of all times, when the world is full of unsound political and economic theories, and America has its share of them, we should protect ourselves and our country's future by shielding this great instrument of our liberties. Let the constitution alone.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

The clamor for release of "political" prisoners seems to have produced results. Eight such prisoners, serving sentences of from five to twenty years, have been permitted to leave the jail. There are conditions imposed such as will be found extremely objectionable to the men and women who have been excoriating the brutality of the government in keeping a bevy of its deadly enemies under lock and key.

HENRY JAMES

The requirement is that each of the men released be deported never to return. They are not wanted here. There is no niche into which they fit. When at liberty they sought to thwart the purposes of the government, or deliberately plotted its overthrow. It was their idea to have the shelter of the constitution while they undermined and blew up the foundation upon which the constitution rested. The idea is obnoxious to the spirit of Americanism.

Frequently it has been said that these men were shut up only by reason of their opinions. The assertion was true exactly in the sense that a burglar or arsonist is shut up by reason of their respective opinions that they had a right to steal, or to burn property. It was when the opinion took the form of doing the forbidden thing, or if inciting others to do it, that the law laid a hand upon them. Similarly the opinion of the "political" prisoner had not been a matter of thought or word, but of deed.

* * *

National Commander Owsley of the American Legion gives warning against anarchistic propaganda. He declares that Trotzky's plan for destruction of America has been more than half accomplished.

If there are any unable to detect anarchistic propaganda, the advice of the commander is good, but the average American has got so that he recognizes the anarchistic stuff at sight. It serves only to strengthen his distaste for anarchy. If he cares to go to the trouble, the citizen may in many instances trace the propaganda to the parlor bolshevist, a person half faker and half fool.

Trotzky's plan doubtless is of most evil intent. That it has been in any appreciable measure accomplished does not appear. That it ever is to be accomplished is a possibility too remote to get alarmed over. There are too many in the Legion, or in sympathy with that organization, ever to permit the insanity of bolshevism to rule this country.

* * *

The minister who accepts office must be ready for the troubles that are its concomitants. For example, the Rev. Winifred Robb of Iowa left the pulpit to become sheriff of Des Moines county. In that capacity he was called upon to hang two unworthy citizens, and performed the duty effectually.

Later he was arrested for the theft of $30,000 worth of whisky. This was another form of trouble, that nobody had expected would be among those to be encountered.

* * *

While it is interesting to notice that the department of agriculture recommends the general eating of meat, it also is interesting to observe the reason. The urging is due to a desire to increase the business of the stock raiser.

Another reason for eating meat might have been cited in the circumstance that it is nourishing to consumers. For this reason they eat it, while the fortunes of the grower and the butcher are so far in the background as not to be considered at all.

* * *

Every once in awhile there is a word thrust into a publicity that it in no manner deserves. For some mysterious reason it is permitted to retain its prominence for a time. When the President wrote "normalcy" he was plucking such a word from its obscure proper station, and elevating it to a status in no way befitting. Happily the use, as he perpetrated it, is dying out. Few have employed the term save in a half-jesting fashion.

Novelists for a season or two found that they could not get along without a free sprinkling of "intrigue." It never was used by them in a proper sense. The reader could grasp the implication of course, but it was an artificial and awkward way the novelists chose to express it. When one says of a thing that attracts or interests him, that it "intrigues" him, he is using poor English.

Just now "reaction" is a favored instrument of writers who readily might find a dozen different words better to express the meaning they seek to convey. The word, perfectly respectable and useful in proper connection, has been made ridiculous.

* * *

It is really pitiful to see how friends of bolshevist devilment writhe in their efforts to defend some of the outrageous edicts of soviet rule. Nor do they find it quite easy to justify the conduct of Russian students in marking the Christmas season by impious demonstrations. The best one American proponent of bolshevism has been able to say about this, is that in the long run such things are unimportant.

In the long run the opinion of an editor will be unimportant. In the long run all things mundane will be unimportant.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

He was a nice looking kid—oh, nothing pretty, but decently dressed and with a good face—but he was frightened. He had stepped on the loose end of a board in this floor we call life and it had flown up and hit him. He came into the office while I was talking with Tim Gannon and said that he wanted a job.

"Nothing doing," says I, sharp and quick, as becomes the executive of a business that will be large and flourishing if it lives.

"Wait a minute," said Tim, as the kid started out. "Do you need a job? I thought so from the way your face changed when you heard the boss say 'no.' Now, lemme tell you. You've got to learn to sell yourself. Put yourself over, see? Get a little punch in the argument."

So Tim took that kid in hand. He gave him no money and he made him no promises, but he convinced him that a little bluff—just a little bluff—is needed in this world. He took him into one of the offices that happened to be empty and drilled him. Then he sent him out to get a job. He got one right off the bat, and do you know where? From the man who runs our shipping department.

"He'll make good, too," said this authority. "I think I can spot a comer when I see him. This kid goes at you right—see? Lots of plunge in him. He'll juggle those packages like Houdini does handcuffs."

As a matter of fact he did, which is not at all to the point. What is essential to this incident is that the head of the packing department turns away applicants for jobs day after day without bothering to look up. Gannon had worked some magic on the youngster. He had converted him from a timid, deprecating, uncertain applicant for work into a man who was bound to get a job any day that he needed it.

"I went through the same experience," Tim told me afterward. "Then a good old heathen put some steam in me. He made me sit down and take account of stock—health, youth, appetite, some education, some intelligence, honesty, two dollars, and a perfectly strange city.

"'Now go sell yourself,' he told me. 'You start in without the handicap of friends or relatives in this town. No one knows you. There is no one to pull you back. Go to it.'"

Tim sold himself to me, I remember, in just that way.

Now There Is No Bunk

—Or catch 'em or hot air about this proposition. We've got the real goods to make your dollars increase like guinea pigs.

—Now you folks who have lived near big oil fields know that there is big money to be made in oil if you get a square deal in an A-1 proven field.

—We are going to put our cards face up on the table and "come clean" with you from the very start.

—In organizing BEMCO NO. 1, a trust syndicate was organized under the rigid laws of the state of California, we picked a 2¼-acre lease right in the midst of all the sure-fire producers on Signal Hill, Long Beach—California's greatest oil field—where over 100,000 barrels of Golden Gold are spouting dividends to thousands of investors daily. This lease adjoins, and our rig is just 350 feet from Herwick No. 7, which has spouted oil over its derrick dozens of times and is a big producer—and is within four city blocks of the two new municipal Long Beach wells—and no farther from a dozen other big producers. Across the street 80 acres are leased by the Doheny interests and active drilling is being rushed on all sides with never a dry hole in the vicinity.

—Our capitalization is unbelievably low, only $125,000, divided into 1250 units of $100 each, and you get full 50 per cent of the oil.

—Here is an example of what your money can earn for you. A man and his wife (living right here in Glendale—names on request) bought 64 units in the 50-50 Syndicate, in this very field, paying $3,100 for same. For the first 10 days' flow of the well, they received a check for $201.50; from the 30 days' flow for the month of September, they received a check for $760.12, making a total of $961.62. The 50-50 Syndicate was capitalized at $350,000.

—Now, if BEMCO NO. 1 is as big as the 50-50 (and there is no reason on earth why it shouldn't be) it will pay you 2 8-10 more money on a capitalization of $125,000. A 2000-barrel well at $1.00 per barrel (which is less than the market price) will pay you $292 a year on every $100 you invest in BEMCO NO. 1.

—To absolutely insure you getting a 100 per cent run for your money, we have signed a $100,000 Turnkey Drilling Contract with the famous big well getter, Jack McKeon, and, for the protection of our unit holders, Mr. McKeon has furnished a $50,000 bond guaranteeing a perfect hole, to a depth, if necessary, of 4500 feet—without any cost beyond the $100,000.

—Our rig is completed. Drilling is soon to commence.

—Seeing is believing. Don't take our word. See the lease at our expense on the corner of Center and Pasadena avenues, just two blocks east of American avenue. Just phone Glendale 408 between 8:30 a. m. and 5 p. m. or Glendale 677-R evenings, and we will call and give you auto ride to lease, free. Good eats included. Phone today.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Adv.

MARY PICKFORD IN HER GREATEST PICTURE, "TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY" AT THE T. D. & L. THEATER

MARY PICKFORD DRAWS 5000 TO T. D. & L.

5000 Glendalians have already seen Mary Pickford in her greatest picture, "Tess of the Storm County," here at the T., D. & L. Theatre, where it started its special engagement last Tuesday. It is to be shown two more days only—today and tomorrow.

Unquestionably, "Tess," this great 10-reel attraction, is Mary Pickford's most wonderful picture. Unreservedly, there is only one Mary Pickford, and of all her pictures—only one "Tess of the Storm Country."

It cost a small fortune to bring it to Glendale. Ralph Allan dared to show it at regular T., D. & L. admission prices. The success of his policy is overwhelming. It has made it possible for hundreds and hundreds of children to see Mary Pickford, beloved of all little folks, that otherwise could not have done so. "Tess of the Storm Country" has broken all attendance records at the T., D. & L. and Ralph Allan predicts that more than 10,000 Glendalians will have seen it here before its final performance is given Friday evening.

The management of the T., D. & L. is to be congratulated. Its signal success has been a tremendous uplift in more ways than one.

Carved Cigarette Holders

Lovely carved cigarette holders of ivory are offered at modest prices. Others of wood are brilliantly painted in fantastic designs.

"TRIFLING WOMEN" IS WELL ENACTED AT THE GLENDALE

"Trifling Women," the latest Rex Ingram production for Metro, was seen for the first time yesterday at the Glendale Theatre, where it was enthusiastically greeted by a large audience. It proved to be an extraordinary photoplay, telling a dramatic story with all the Ingram attention to detail, remarkably well acted, beautifully set, and photographed with rare skill.

In the photoplay, which, by the way, was written and adapted by Mr. Ingram himself, are seen the various factors which have contributed to the unique position which this gifted director holds in the motion picture world. Since his epochal production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," he has made photoplays which have all borne the stamp of his genius. In the opinion of many who saw it yesterday, "Trifling Women" surpasses anything he has hitherto accomplished.

Mr. Ingram's dramatic story deals with the fatal power of the beautiful Zareda, a crystal gazer, for whose favor men conspire against each other. An aged baron loves the siren, and when he discovers that his son Ivan is charmed by her, he packs him off to war. He next must rid Zareda of the presence of the wealthy Marquis Ferroni, but in the attempt to poison him, he himself meets death. Zareda marries the Marquis for his money; and when Ivan returns, their interrupted affair is resumed. The husband is seriously wounded in an encounter with Ivan, and the lovers rejoice that he has been put out of the way. But he strangely comes back, his being revitalized by the desire for revenge.

POTENTIAL ARMY STRENGTH

This comparison of powers made by the war department of the United States is based on equipment that the powers have on hand.

The United States can completely equip 1,014,000 men, and in this respect is at the bottom of the list, just behind Japan, with 1,200,000 that can be completely equipped.

However, the United States can both partially and completely equip 3,000,00 men, as against 2,000,000 that Japan could partially and completely equip. From this standpoint the United States is fourth on the list and ahead of Japan.

The first on the list is the British Empire, with 6,000,000 that could be fully equipped. No figure is given for those who could be partially equipped.

France comes second with 5,304,000 that could be fully equipped.

Italy is fourth on the list with 3,300,000 that could be fully equipped.

Commercial Fleets of Powers

The British Empire has the largest commercial fleet in the world. The tonnage is 23,088,000.

The United States comes second with a tonnage of 18,049,000.

France has a tonnage of 3,845,000: Italy, of 2,492,000, and Japan of 3,996,000.

China has only 142,834 tonnage.

Unusual Soup Bowls

CULTIVATE YOUR IMAGINATION TO CURE SAYS COUE

If Properly Coue-Coued, Disease Would Leave a Happy Home, He Says

By RICHARD CHAPLIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Cultivate your imagination and cure your diseases.

This is the advice of Emile Coue to an ailing world. The famous Frenchman, whose slogan, "Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better," has become an international craze, arrived here this afternoon on the White Star liner, Majestic.

"Imagination is far greater even than will power," he said, "and if people would only imagine they are all right, why that would end all their troubles."

Coue looked the picture of health despite the rough and stormy passage. He is short and rather plump, with a ruddy complexion and has much the manner of a prosperous druggist—which he was until he took up hypnotism and later auto-suggestion. He first studied hypnotism by mail. Later he developed auto-suggestion, and now thousands attend his clinics for treatment of all sorts of ailments.

He declared that he was not the least bit seasick on the trip over despite the stormy weather, and said that it "would have been a very bad example."

Coue, who insists that he must be called neither doctor nor professor, will remain in New York about three weeks, giving lectures, and will establish here a Coue clinic, where the principles of auto-suggestion will be taught to the city's ailing.

"I myself can cure nothing," he said. "I can only teach people to cure themselves. One of my greatest ambitions is to see my theories adopted and taught in schools of medicine. It is the easiest possible thing to cure yourself. Drunkards can be cured in a very short time if they want to be. However, the patient must have faith to cure himself."

Arriving with the Nancy druggist was the Marchessa Mannucci Capponi, who says she was cured by his method of neuritis, from which she had suffered for years. She will help to establish clinics throughout the country.

Besides teaching people to cure themselves of disease, Coue said his method can also cure defects in character, and if it were taken up thoroughly would rid the world of criminals.

New Ribbons Beautiful

Never have ribbons been more decorative and there are new, wide ribbons of silver backed with green, or gold backed with rose, that are strikingly beautiful.

THE STRIPED TABBY

By JOHN BECK

Never make the brash-sounding statement that the skunk was the family cat of the Indians unless you can produce a tame one for first-hand corroboration. They aren't so very hard to find. A striped fellow takes kindly to a civil invitation to mouse-hunt around a miner's cabin or a settler's shack, in odd corners of the earth where cats don't live—long.

For pussy's proverbial curiosity soon proves fatal when she attempts to compete with creatures of the wild. She may be victorious over many a rat, and then have a phlegmatic gopher slit her jugular. She may dodge dogs around a farm, where the next fence post gives her a perch from which to spit her derision. But it's quite another matter to match wits with the sly coyote out in the unfenced prairie. No, our cat is a granger. Without any further historical evidence, the mere fact that the Assyrians and Egyptians held cats in high esteem would have stamped them as agriculturists. When the American farmer was king, did puss not hold the seat of honor behind his milking stool? Is she not still a popular deity among all those who handle grain, from the ear to the loaf? The rest of us may tolerate her for old times' sake, but we begin to look down on her. She may thrive on the rats and mice in the alleys of the town—but she lacks honor. Yes, the cat is by rights as rural as the cow—but she is no pioneer.

Unfortunately, the skunk does equally ill in civilization. To shut a door behind him is a serious breach of skunk etiquette. He feels trapped. And his undeniable argument is a serious breach of our own. Nevertheless, he has virtues which entitle him to serious consideration, even by the farmer. It is a happy day when one takes up its abode with him. For a skunk's sense of "mine and thine" is something no cat ever attains. Miaula may not eat your little chicks, but if her son develops a taste for feathers she merely observes that "boys will be boys," or the like, in cat talk, and overlooks the matter. Of if the cat next door chooses to hunt on your domain, that is your affair, not hers.

But if a skunk makes himself unpopular in a chicken coop it will be your neighbor's, not your own. He never hunts near home, nor does he lay his feathers on your doorstep. He is also very inhospitable to any prowler of his own kind. He leaves no room for misunderstanding, permits no depredations on the home roost which can possibly be attributed to him. To expect him to hunt your enemies while he spares your flocks would be asking too much discrimination from a wild thing. Fortunately he is spared that decision. The mice know their master: the rascal rats dare not face him. They decamp en masse to stock the happy hunting ground of your neighbor's granary, all unwitting of the fact that there is the very place where he prefers to do his hunting.

Mr. and Mrs. Rankin Morford recently celebrated the 65th anniversary of their marriage, surrounded by their friends in their home at Seattle, Wash. "Seventy-five years ago," said the aged husband, "I promised to love, cherish and protect a beautiful young girl 'until death do us part.' She promised to love, honor and obey me. We have both found delight in living up to our promises. We're the same sweethearts that we were the day we were married." He is 89 years old, his sweetheart-wife 87.

DRUG BARRAGE THREATENS LONDON

So Reports Correspondent of the United Press on Hamburg Traffic

BY LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Underworld artillery, belching projectiles more deadly than steel and T. N. T., is in action 24 hours a day in the free-port of Hamburg, and the target of this gruesome hail is England.

More sinister than wars of armed men this vicious offensive of the German half-world is of the subtle, utterly destructive sort that alarmist writers prophesy will mark the next holocaust of nations.

No mere armistice can hinder it. A peace treaty is useless. Yet England is as surely under a deadly fire as though the memorable meeting on November 11, 1918, had never occurred.

The human debris left in the wake of this monstrous engagement is composed of wrecks more heart rending than the blind, the lame and the maimed heritage of the world war.

English men and women themselves are aiding the successful operation of the unseen army. Frantically they strain to assure success to those who plot their ruin. They would be the last to admit that a war is in progress. Unrecognized by international court, without the pale of decent humanity, it is here, nevertheless.

An English weekly magazine has exposed the master plotters in Hamburg. Their slimy tentacles are coiling about the very heart of England.

Scum from the ships of every nation has left its quota of indecency at Hamburg. The cunning and calm of the Orient has vied with the less advanced talent of the Occident in giving the half world of Hamburg the most subtly degenerate means of entertainment.

Denizens of the Hamburg dens of horror have discovered that the golden key to success is represented in the little packets of morphia and its derivatives delivered to England.

It was no special hatred of the English that directed the flood of drugs toward London. England is the best market because highest prices are obtainable there. Highest prices are obtained because efforts to keep the drugs out are less sincere in other countries.

In Hamburg, according to the report just published, cocaine in ounce packages may be obtained for the equivalent of a few pennies in English money. Transported a few miles across the gleaming water of the channel the little packets appreciate in price many thousand per cent. It is a means of soft livelihood that cannot be overlooked.

The drug is smuggled over by sailors. Some comes across in shipments of German goods. A few highly connected firms, principally those that supply the wealthy snow sniffers or the English wholesalers, send private messengers with thousands of dollars represented by the little packets secreted about their persons and in their luggage.

Hardly a day passes but there is a dope arrest or a death chronicled which is attributed to the drug. Piccadilly Circus, the hub of London's night life, is the most frequent scene of arrests.

Haunted from sunset until midnight by hundreds of women who must have the precious powder to steel themselves to the lives they lead, the Circus offers bounteous harvest to one with the cocaine and the nerve to sell it.

Profits are rich. Even for effecting the introduction of addict to one who is in a position to supply the drug will often bring a handsome tip from both parties.

Women haunt Picadilly and its dark side streets. Their ranks are thinned by the law and by the horrible deaths so frequently the reward of the followers of such a life. There is no falling off in the nightly numbers. The night clubs keep the supply coming in steadily.

The drug agent gets his soon after the pounding of the streets begins. It doesn't take much of the vicious circling about gaudy, crimson-tinted Picadilly Circus to turn the weary girl to anything that promises relief.

That drugs are coming into England in a growing stream is certain. The investigator just returned from Hamburg is convinced that the headquarters of the depraved ring is located in the underworld of Hamburg.

It is an attack, without particular malice, by the port riffraff of the defeated country, and unless it is checked may do harm comparably to that wrought by the belching guns of the world war.

MISERERE

Tree's all down and the popcorn strings
Gone with the rest of the Christmas things.
Empty bags where the candy was,
Mine and Sister's and Ma's and Pa's.
Lights all out on the Christmas tree,
Dark in the corner that used to be
All bright and gay and full of cheer,
And they won't come back for a whole long year.

Turkey's gone, to the last picked bone,
Only the carcass left alone;
Nuts all shelled and the shells thrown out,
Not any sweet things left about.
Nothing to look for anywheres,
Back in the closets or under the stairs,
Tried all the toys and the things we had,
Gee but the world is awful sad.

Split my drum on the very first day,
Bent my horn so it will not play,
Lost one skate somewhere outdoors,
Have to go back to doing chores.
Lived for a week on pie and cake,
Just got over the stomach ache,
Hunting my books and slate and rule,
Nowhere to go but back to school.

FOUR BIG FIGHTS SLATED FOR '23

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Since all the big ring money grows now in the open air, very little activity with the exception of ordinary routine, is to be expected until next summer.

Four major bouts that may be contested next summer are too big for any indoor arenas and they are probably the best in store for the fans if they can be arranged.

No better entertainment could be wanted than action between:

Jack Dempsey and Luis Firpo.

Tommy Gibbons and Gene Tunney.

Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler.

Jimmy Wilde and Pancho Villa.

* * * * * *

Putting the South American giant Firpo in the line, ahead of Harry Wills, for a crack at Jack Dempsey's heavyweight championship, is bound to be protested.

It may be done, though, because public opinion, as represented in State officials, has not been worked up to brave the danger of the reaction from a mixed heavyweight championship.

It may be done also because since several bad showings in recent months, the impression is spreading that Wills has gone so far back that he would be no match for the young champion.

You can put it in your hat and remember it that Dempsey is not afraid of Wills. Dempsey doesn't pick his opponents. The promoters do that and they do it only after feeling the pulse of the public.

Tex Rickard says he doubts that Dempsey and Wills ever will meet, but that he will stage a Dempsey-Firpo fight if the South American ships the winner of the Johnson-Brennan bout.

Gene Tunney seems to be the only one that Tommy Gibbons can get for a fight and it is doubtful if the former American light heavyweight champion ever agrees to meet him.

Gibbons, in the honest opinion of many wise followers of the ring, would make as good an opponent for Dempsey as there is on the market now, but his inferior size would be a handicap in the drawing power of the card.

Brennan, Greb and all the other "leading contenders" refuse to consider the name of Gibbons, and Tom has to go around the country tapping second raters on the chin and getting criticized for it.

If Floyd Johnson whips Bill Brennan he should not be allowed to talk of another match until he meets Gibbons.

Benny Leonard is talking again of the never dying hatred that he bears against Lew Tendler, the Philadelphia southpaw.

That can mean but one thing. If the signs were up on the bill boards, it could be no more proof that another Leonard-Tendler fight is in the steam room.

Benny is in a bad way financially. He dropped a pile of coin trying to put over a Broadway show and he needs the money.

All the dough he needs for a while is forthcoming from a bout with Tendler—FIFTEEN rounds to a DECISION.

The public hardly will stand for anything else.

Charles White is yelping about a chance for the title, but he never will win the championship from Leonard.

"If White could be made to forget that it was Leonard he was fighting, he might have a chance," Jack McAuliffe says. "Until then, never."

* * * * * *

For the little fellows, there is only one real card and that in all probability will be made between Jimmy Wilde, the world's flyweight champion, and Pancho Villa, the American champion.

If the little Welshman didn't have so much age on him and hadn't been out of the ring for so long, it would be a toss up, but it looks much like Villa from a distance.

Dave Driscoll, the Brooklyn promoter, has the contract for a bout and it will be fought in this country.

A SCREEN MARTYR

Burning a man alive looks very realistic on the screen, so much so, in fact, that observers upon leaving the theatre are more affected by the painful spectacle witnessed than by the mechanics of its achievement.

One sees the stake, the martyr tied to it, the logs piled about him, the flames licking the victim's clothing and is swayed by all the emotions attendant upon such a harrowing spectacle.

Fortunately the would-be martyr was very comfortable during the process of the taking of the picture, and upon leaving the stake was unscorched and in fine spirit.

The solution is simple. The logs are made of asbestos built about wire netting and painted to look like real logs. Over them wood ashes are sprinkled.

Electric lights are placed behind red paper to effect glowing embers. And as far as the screen is concerned the result is eminently satisfactory.

Next, cold and harmless flames must be produced. They are simply long streamers of bright red silk that are blown up, fluttering and licking, by a current of air from a large electric fan down at the bottom of the pile.

Then the victim is tied to the stake, the lights are turned on for the glowing embers, the artificial flames roar softly as the fan blows them up, and the picture is completed by skillful light effects.

The result in the "movie" house is startling.

A get-rich-quick lump of physical energy in the form of an out-of-work commercial traveler applied to the manager of a firm.

He maintained that once on the job he could guarantee such a flock of orders that the staff would be unable to cope with them.

The manager knew his business and said:

"Well, young fellow, I'd like to see if you could do something. I can't. Industry is in a topsy-turvy muddle, and you can't get orders out of chaos."

The applicant squared his shoulders and declared, as he looked up a telephone directory:

"Let me do it. I haven't the pleasure of knowing Mr. Yayoss, but I'll get an order out of him somehow."

He didn't get the job, though.

Pie Wagon Driver Resents Rough Stuff of Hold-Up Men

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 4.—"Some of these bandits go too far and you just have to hit them," Clyde Zick, pie-wagon driver, meekly apologized to police.

Zick struck a pair of bandits for the second time because they were "discourteous" when they held him up, he explained.

"I told them I had $20 and held up my hands for them to take it. Instead of being satisfied one bandit slashed my face with a knife and the other kicked me.

"I couldn't stand that, so I hit back and they ran without taking the money."

Zick said he was held up a month ago.

"I told them to take the money, but they got rough that time, too, so I just had to kick them off my wagon and drive away," he said.

CONFIDENCE BIG FACTOR

WHY is Confidence a more important factor in plumbing work than in almost any other purchase or contract?

In a majority of selections made in the building or furnishing of a home you know what is wanted, how to select it, where it should go, what its quality and value are.

But when it comes to plumbing, remember that one-half of it is out of sight; hidden behind walls, under floors, where it cannot be seen.

That is where CONFIDENCE comes in. If the plumber is RIGHT the job will be RIGHT. It will contain the right kind of workmanship and materials.

Therefore, select the RIGHT plumber. There is one SURE way of doing this. Pick out a member of the Sanitary Development League which is composed of 200 leading plumbing concerns in Southern California.

These plumbers stand pledged to uphold the lofty ideals and business standards of the industry. They are successful, high class business men who have established reputations. They stand behind their work.

CONFIDENCE can be placed in them.
